ABOUT THE AREA

Just a short drive from Marbella, Estepona is popular with locals and foreign buyers alike. You may have seen the beautiful blue and pink flowers that hang from the sides of buildings, well, you can expect that pretty feel in Estepona. The town has maintained its traditional Spanish character and the cobbled streets are maintained to a high standard of cleanliness and appearance to attract tourism and promote quality of life for residents.

The port in Estepona has grown greatly in popularity in the last decade as an alternative to Puerto Banus for boat owners and the large number of restaurants and bars around it are testament to its popularity. The town itself offers a wealth of restaurants. In the Summer, you can walk along Calle Real in the evening and be taken aback at the number of wonderful places there are to stop and eat, with the street full of people enjoying their evening meal in wonderful surroundings.

The town itself has a fascinating history dating back hundreds of years and evidence of this can be found in sites around the town where the influence of past Spanish and Moorish rulers can be seen. Estepona also has a beautiful seaside promenade that is great for a walk at any time of the day, particularly in the evening during the Summer when the cool breeze that comes off the sea is particularly refreshing. From the promenade, you can walk directly to the port or into the town centre in a matter of minutes, with ample underground parking situated below the promenade itself. In the day, there are beautiful beaches on offer and Estepona has one of the largest and longest on the Costa del Sol.
