Every window and French door is additionally equipped with persianas (traditional integrated roller blinds) and mosquiteras (fly screens).

Ground Floor Living and Culinary Excellence

At the absolute heart of the ground floor sits a striking, bespoke designer kitchen (23.34m²). This dual-aspect culinary space features premium Silestone countertops, a substantial central preparation island, and a dining area overlooking the manicured rear garden. ABOUT THE AREA

Iznájar is a captivating cliffside village located in the southernmost corner of the Córdoba province in Andalusia, Spain. Perched high on a rocky promontory, the town offers a dramatic and highly picturesque visual profile, as its winding maze of whitewashed houses seems to float directly over the water below. This unique geographic feature is a result of the sprawling Iznájar Reservoir—frequently referred to as the 'Lake of Andalusia'—which wraps around the base of the hill and stands as the largest reservoir in the entire region.

The town's rich historical heritage dates back thousands of years, having transitioned from a prehistoric Iberian settlement into a fortified stronghold during the Moorish rule of the 8th century. The Arab settlers constructed a grand fortress atop the hill named Hins Ashar (meaning 'stone castle'), from which the modern name Iznájar is directly derived. Today, visitors can explore the remarkable 1,200-year-old castle ruins and walk through the historic Patio de las Comedias, a vibrant, blue-potted courtyard that historically served as a central hub for theatrical culture.

Beyond its rich architecture, Iznájar serves as a natural gateway to the stunning Sierra Subbéticas Natural Park, surrounded by rolling hills and vast landscapes of endless olive groves. The massive reservoir has transformed the area into an unexpected inland beach destination, particularly at the Valdearenas recreational site. Here, locals and travelers flock to swim, fish, or enjoy water sports like kayaking, sailing, and paddle surfing against a backdrop of rugged mountain peaks.

For air travel, the absolute closest airport to the village is Federico García Lorca Granada-Jaén Airport (GRX), located approximately 48 kilometers to the east (about a 45-minute drive). However, because the Granada airport primarily handles domestic and selective regional flights, most international travelers opt to fly into Málaga-Costa del Sol Airport (AGP). Málaga Airport is located roughly...
