ABOUT THE AREA

Strasbourg, the capital of the Alsace region in northeastern France, is a city defined by its unique blend of French and German influences. Situated on the border with Germany, it serves as a symbolic heart of Europe, hosting major institutions such as the European Parliament, the Council of Europe, and the European Court of Human Rights. The city's historic center, the Grande Île, is a UNESCO World Heritage site renowned for its stunning Gothic cathedral and the picturesque Petite France district, where timber-framed houses line the tranquil canals.

The city is a vibrant cultural hub, offering a sophisticated mix of traditional Alsatian charm and modern European energy. Visitors are frequently drawn to its famous Christmas markets, refined culinary scene—which highlights local specialties like tarte flambée and Riesling wine—and a lively academic atmosphere fostered by its historic university. Throughout the year, the city maintains a scenic, romantic appeal that attracts travelers from across the globe.

For those traveling by air, the city is primarily served by Strasbourg Airport (SXB), also known as Strasbourg-Entzheim International Airport. Located approximately 10 to 12 kilometers southwest of the city center in the town of Entzheim, it is the most convenient gateway for those flying directly into the region. The airport is well-integrated with the city's transport network, featuring a dedicated train station that offers quick, efficient shuttle services to the main Strasbourg-Ville railway station in under 10 minutes.

While Strasbourg Airport offers a range of European connections, travelers arriving from further afield often utilize larger international hubs. Many international visitors choose to fly into major airports like Frankfurt or Zurich and complete their journey to Strasbourg via high-speed train connections. This excellent rail connectivity, combined with the city's central position in Europe, makes Strasbourg an accessible and highly sought-after destination for both international business and leisure tourism.
