ABOUT THE AREA

Spanish Town, the vibrant capital and largest commercial hub of the parish of St. Catherine, stands as Jamaica's oldest continuously inhabited city. Originally founded by the Spanish in 1534 under the name Villa de la Vega, this deeply storied settlement served as the island's official capital for well over three centuries under both Spanish and British colonial rule. It wasn't until 1872 that the seat of government was officially relocated to nearby Kingston. Today, the town acts as a fascinating bridge between Jamaica's rich imperial past and its energetic modern-day commerce.

The city's majestic history is beautifully preserved in its central Emancipation Square, widely considered one of the finest examples of Georgian architecture in the West Indies. Visitors and residents alike can walk past monumental landmarks like the Rodney Memorial, the historic House of Assembly, and the imposing ruins of the Old King's House—the very site where the proclamation abolishing slavery was read to the public in 1838. Adding to its cultural prestige is the St. Jago de la Vega Cathedral, an architectural marvel built atop a 16th-century Spanish chapel, making it one of the oldest Anglican cathedrals in the Americas.

Beyond its historical allure, Spanish Town has evolved into a thriving, modern commercial and processing center. Strategically situated along the banks of the Rio Cobre, the city serves as a vital economic engine for the surrounding agricultural plains, processing essential crops like sugarcane, citrus fruits, and bananas. Neighborhoods like Ensom City have grown into highly sought-after, established residential communities that cater to families, business professionals, and local entrepreneurs who value a community-centric lifestyle balanced by robust urban conveniences.

For travel and international commerce, the city boasts exceptional accessibility to Jamaica's transport infrastructure. The nearest airport is Norman Manley International Airport (KIN), located just across the harbor in Kingston, roughly 14 to 20 miles east. Depending on traffic via Highway 2000, residents and visitors can easily commute between Spanish Town and the airport in about 30 to 45 minutes, seamlessly connecting this historic powerhouse to major cities across the globe.
