Kamala was originally a small fishing village, with the local population being mainly Muslim.

Over the years Kamala has also become a popular destination for retirees and long term visitors that stay in the small hotels, villas and apartment rentals around the area.

The fishing village atmosphere remains, and its not unusual to see local fishermen casting their nets.

The northern end of the bay is heaven, here you will find an unspoiled white sandy beach with a very laid back and relaxed atmosphere.

The middle section off Kamala is pretty much dominated by the local village, including resorts, small bars and seafood restaurants.

While the southern end of the beach can get fairly busy during the high season, it has a totally different feel compared to Patong or Karon, and is generally much more relaxed.

ABOUT THE AREA

Kamala Beach is a quiet stretch of sand located around 9.5 km north of Patong in Phuket. It's an excellent spot for sunbathing and you can find many beach activities at the northern end of the beach. With its quieter pace, Kamala is a popular spot for retirees and longer-term visitors in Phuket. Along a winding road leading to the beach, there are small hotels, villas and apartments with great views of Kamala Bay.

The waters of Kamala Beach are clear and calm from November to April (high season), but large waves caused by the ocean swell are common between May and October. While swimming is usually very safe on Kamala Beach, it's a good idea to leave the sea to the surfers when you see red flags flying.

Dining on Kamala Beach
Head towards the southern end of Kamala Beach to find many beachfront hotels, where you can enjoy Thai and international dishes at their onsite restaurants. There are also a few local restaurants just a short walk away.

At the northern end, there's an area with hawker stalls selling all kinds of Thai cuisine from different parts of the country. You'll usually find chicken satay, spicy salads, and curries, as well as traditional desserts. Further north from there, you'll come across luxury beach clubs like Cafe del Mar Phuket and HQ Beach Lounge, both of which serve high-quality international food.
