Apartment of over 170 m2 on the sixth floor of a regal building right in Barcelona's Passeig de Grícia, magnificently oriented in order to get direct sunlight while benefiting from the best possible views of both Casa Amatller and Casa Batlló, one of Gaudí's most renowned masterpieces.

As we enter the apartment, adjacent to a large living room presided by enormous windows and a fairly big balcony overlooking Passeig de Grícia, we find an open plan kitchen fitted with paneled, top of the line appliances and a big marbled island, while down the hall we get into its night area, composed of three double bedrooms, one of them being apart from the rest and overlooking the block's silent and wide backyard while featuring as well a beautiful dressing room (which could very well be another double room) and a hidden, surprisingly designed full bathroom that won't leave anybody indifferent by virtue of its black marble and goldbread finishes.

Despite of being right in the epicentre of one of Europe's most exclusive streets, and literally surrounded by luxuriant stores and restaurants, this area of already select Quadrat d'Or is nonetheless part of Barcelona's Eixample Dret, with all services necessary for daily life right there, while extremely well communicated by train, subway and bus to anywhere inside or outside of the city.
