ABOUT THE AREA

Pissos is a tranquil commune located in the heart of the Landes de Gascogne Regional Natural Park in the southwest of France. Situated in the northern part of the Landes department, it is surrounded by the vast Landes forest, which is one of the largest maritime pine massifs in Europe. The village is characterized by its traditional Gascon heritage and is positioned roughly 55 kilometers north of the regional prefecture, Mont-de-Marsan.

The community is deeply rooted in nature and local traditions, often hosting events such as the Pentecost celebrations that bring together residents and visitors for festive gatherings. Its geography is defined by a flat, sandy plain and an altitude that remains below 80 meters, offering a serene environment ideal for outdoor activities like hiking and cycling. The nearby Leyre River also provides opportunities for canoeing through the preserved landscapes of the regional park.

Visitors to Pissos can explore historical landmarks such as local century-old churches and picturesque half-timbered houses that reflect the architectural history of the region. The town serves as a gateway to broader Landes attractions, including the nearby Atlantic coastline with its expansive sandy beaches and world-class surfing spots like Mimizan and Biscarrosse. Gastronomy is another highlight, with local markets regularly featuring regional specialties like foie gras and duck breast.

For travelers arriving by air, the nearest major airport to Pissos is Bordeaux–Mérignac Airport (BOD). Located approximately 30 to 50 kilometers away depending on the route, it offers the most convenient international and domestic connections for those visiting the northern Landes district. Other regional options include Biarritz and Pau airports, though these are situated further south and are typically better suited for reaching other parts of the department.
