ABOUT THE AREA

Dublin has been in the news since the 9th century, and while traces of its Viking past have been largely washed away, the city is a living museum of its history since then, with medieval castles and cathedrals on display alongside the architectural splendours of its 18th-century heyday, when Dublin was the most handsome Georgian city of the British Empire and a fine reflection of the aspirations of its most privileged citizens. How power was wrested from their hands is another story, and you'll learn that one in its museums and on its walking tours.

Dubliners at their ease are the greatest hosts of all, a charismatic bunch with compelling soul and sociability. Even in these times of green juices and heart-monitoring apps, the pub remains the alpha and omega of social interaction in Dublin. The city's relationship with alcohol is complex and conflicted but, at its very best, a night out in the pub is the perfect social lubricant and one of the highlights of a visit to Dublin. Every Dubliner has their favourite haunt, from the never-changing traditional pub to whatever new opening is bringing in the beautiful people. With more than 1000 of them spread about the city, you'll be spoilt for choice.

For as long as it's been around, Dublin has looked beyond Irish shores for inspiration. Once the second city of the (British) Empire, Dublin has always maintained a pretty cosmopolitan outlook and in the last three decades has conspicuously embraced diversity and multiculturalism. You will hear languages and eat foods from all four corners of the globe, and while it used to be said that 'real' Dubs had to be born within the canals like their parents and grandparents before them, these days you're just as likely to meet a Dub whose parents were born in Warsaw, Lagos, Cairo or Beijing.

Dublin is home to The Phoenix Park (1747 acres) which is the largest enclosed public park in any capital city in Europe. The Park is home to a large herd of fallow deer, the Zoo, Aras and Uachtarain (Presidents Home) and Victorian flower gardens.

Dublin is also a hotbed for sports with the iconic Croke Park, 85k seated stadium 11km away and home to Ireland's rugby and soccer teams is The Aviva Stadium, just 7km away. For horse racing there are the beautiful Leopardstown, The Curragh and Fairyhouse courses nearby.

Golf enthusiasts will not be disappointed either as Dublin is next to many of the countries world famous courses including The Grange, Luttrellstown Castle, Sutton, Killiney, The Royal Dublin and Portmarnock Golf Clubs to name but a few.
