Surrounded by tropical forest and mountain views, this freestanding home features a private pool, black-framed windows, and wood-accented finishes that blend seamlessly with its jungle surroundings. Welcome to Cortez Amarillo #66 - Bosque Tropic Village, a 4-bedroom jungle sanctuary located within the private forest valley of the Pacifico community in Playas del Coco, Costa Rica. Here, the sounds of the wind brushing through the treetops, the howls of monkeys echoing above, and the soft chirping of tropical birds create a rhythm that connects you to nature at every moment.

This freestanding villa is designed for those seeking a slower, more intentional way of living—fully integrated into the lush surroundings of Costa Rica's northwest coast. Set on a pristine mountain-view lot, Cortez Amarillo #66 features a private pool and expansive indoor-outdoor living spaces that blur the line between home and habitat.

The architecture is modern and ecological, rooted in simplicity and function while inspired by the land. Clean black-framed windows and doors open to the forest, while wood accents throughout the home reflect the textures and tones of the trees that surround it. The result is a harmonious, contemporary home that feels both grounded and elevated.

Bosque Tropic Village is an exclusive, nature-centered community consisting of just 14 homes developed across several phases. Residents enjoy the benefits of low-density living and the beauty of the preserved forest. Walking trails wind through the trees, a yoga deck offers space for reflection, and a shared picnic area encourages connection with neighbors in a serene setting.

As part of the larger gated Pacifico community, homeowners also benefit from resort-style amenities, 24-hour security, and proximity to the vibrant beach town of Playas del Coco—with its shops, restaurants, marina, and sparkling coastline just minutes away.

Cortez Amarillo #66 is more than a home—it's an invitation to live among the trees, in balance with the rhythms of nature, in one of Costa Rica's most thoughtfully planned tropical communities.
