Elvas, with its fortifications, has been a UNESCO World Heritage Site since 2012, recognized for its historical and military importance as "Border Barracks City of Elvas and its fortifications". The set includes the historic center, bastioned walls, the Amoreira Aqueduct, and the forts of Santa Luzia, Graça, and the forts of São Pedro, São Mamede and São Domingos.

The fortified system of Elvas is considered the largest in the world in the typology of bastion fortifications on land, with a perimeter of 8 to 10 kilometers and an area of 300 hectares.

The bastioned walls, built in the 17th century, are a remarkable example of the first Dutch tradition of military architecture according to Cultural Heritage. The Fort of Grace, a remarkable example of eighteenth-century military architecture, is considered by many historians to be one of the most powerful bastioned fortresses in the world.

The Amoreira Aqueduct, built between 1530 and 1622, is the largest in the Iberian Peninsula and essential for the city's water supply.

In addition to the fortifications, the city of Elvas has other important monuments such as the Castle, the Governors' Palace, the Cathedral, and the churches of São Pedro and the Dominicans
