ABOUT THE AREA

New Cairo, known in Arabic as El-Qāhera el-Gedīda, is a meticulously planned satellite city and one of Egypt's most prominent urban developments, forming a vital part of the Greater Cairo metropolitan area. Established in 2000, it was a strategic initiative by the Egyptian government to decentralize population and economic activity from the congested core of old Cairo. Built on the eastern desert plateau, its design emphasizes wide avenues, green spaces, and modern infrastructure, providing a stark contrast to the historic and often densely packed districts of central Cairo. This modern urban planning reflects a broader vision for Egypt's future, aiming to attract private investment and promote a contemporary, high-quality lifestyle.

The city comprises several distinct settlements, including the First, Third, and Fifth Settlements, along with popular areas like Al Rehab and Madinaty. It has rapidly evolved into a self-sufficient hub, boasting a mix of upscale residential compounds, thriving commercial centers, and institutional zones. New Cairo is particularly favored by upper and elite classes, offering an abundance of amenities that cater to a luxurious and convenient lifestyle. These include a wide array of international schools, prestigious universities such as the American University in Cairo (AUC) and the German University in Cairo (GUC), state-of-the-art hospitals, and expansive shopping malls like Cairo Festival City, which features global brands, diverse dining options, and entertainment venues.

Beyond its modern amenities, New Cairo offers a balanced environment for residents. Its well-maintained parks, dedicated cycling and jogging tracks, and various sports clubs provide ample opportunities for outdoor activities and a healthy lifestyle. The city's strategic location, east of the Cairo Ring Road and easily accessible via major highways like the Cairo-Suez Road and Ain Sokhna Road, ensures seamless connectivity to other parts of Greater Cairo and beyond. This connectivity is further enhanced by an evolving public transportation network, including bus lines and ongoing monorail construction set to link New Cairo with Nasr City and the New Administrative Capital.

For international travelers and residents, New Cairo is well-served by two primary airports. The Cairo International Airport (CAI) is Egypt's largest and busiest airport, serving as the main hub for both international and domestic flights. Located approximately 22 kilometers northeast of downtown Cairo and easily accessible from New Cairo, it offers extensive connections to major global destinations. A newer and increasingly popular option is Capital International Airport (CCE), strategically located within the New Administrative Capital, just east of New Cairo. While CAI offers a broader range of flight options and is closer to central Cairo attractions, CCE provides a convenient and often less congested alternative for those based in or frequently ...
