It is also the largest department of the region. Two rivers, the Seine and the Marne run through it, ahence the department getting its named.

Seine et Marne is a rich department which houses as much rural areas as an extension of Paris suburbs. It is also the largest department in the region for agriculture in fact around 60% of its area is covered by crops, mainly wheat and sugar beets. Thanks to its location close by Paris and next to the Roissy Charles de Gaulle airport, the economy of Seine et Marne is very strong. Tourism is another large source of income for the department, due to its cultural and historical heritage, the area attracts many visitors, not to mention the Disney Entertainment Park which is one of the most tourist attractions in France.
