ABOUT THE AREA

Albertville is a suburb of Johannesburg, South Africa. It is located in Region 4.

Johannesburg, South Africa's biggest city and capital of Gauteng province, began as a 19th-century gold-mining settlement. Its sprawling Soweto township was once home to Nelson Mandela and Desmond Tutu. Mandela's former residence is now the Mandela House museum. Other Soweto museums that recount the struggle to end segregation include the somber Apartheid Museum and Constitution Hill, a former prison complex.

Johannesburg is South Africa's most diverse, progressive and energetic city, the country's best showcase for activism and optimism. There's really nowhere better if you want to see the face of modern South Africa and get a sense of how far the nation's come and where it's going next.

Though the city – like the rest of South Africa – is still dealing with the legacy of racial segregation, it has become a truly diverse place. Walk around Johannesburg and you'll hear snatches of Afrikaans, Zulu and Xhosa, but you may also catch some Urdu, Hindi or Chinese.

High-intensity in everything it does, Johannesburg manages not only to be the country's biggest and the continent's richest city but also – at least according to the locals – the world's largest man-made forest.

There are some ten million trees dotted around, lending the place a surprisingly fresh and spacious feel.
