ABOUT THE AREA

Valencia, the capital of the autonomous community of Valencia, is the third-largest city in Spain, blending millennia of history with striking modern innovation. Founded as a Roman colony in 138 BC, the city has been ruled by Visigoths, Moors, and Christians, each leaving an indelible mark on its architecture and culture. Its historic heart, the Ciutat Vella, boasts medieval gems like the UNESCO World Heritage site of La Lonja de la Seda (The Silk Exchange) and the central cathedral, which famously claims to house the Holy Grail. This rich history provides a contrast to the city's modern identity as a hub for art, commerce, and design.

Valencia's modern face is most famously represented by the City of Arts and Sciences (Ciudad de las Artes y las Ciencias), a colossal, futuristic complex designed by Santiago Calatrava and Félix Candela. This architectural marvel, built on the diverted bed of the Túria River, houses the Hemisfèric (an IMAX cinema and planetarium), the Science Museum Príncipe Felipe, the Oceanogràfic (Europe's largest aquarium), and the Palau de les Arts Reina Sofía (an opera house). This complex, along with the beautiful gardens of the former riverbed that now acts as a green lung for the city, symbolises Valencia's forward-looking spirit and commitment to culture and public space.

Beyond its physical landmarks, Valencia is renowned globally for its unique cultural contributions and Mediterranean lifestyle. It is the undisputed birthplace of Paella, with the surrounding huerta (fertile agricultural land) still cultivating the rice necessary for the authentic dish. The city also hosts one of Spain's most spectacular and fiery festivals, Las Fallas, a week-long celebration in March featuring enormous papier-mâché sculptures that are ultimately set ablaze. Furthermore, the city's economy thrives on its position as a major industrial centre and one of the busiest container ports in Europe, reflecting its historic importance as a trading gateway.
