ABOUT THE AREA

Nestled between the crystalline waters of the Gulf of Naples and the rugged peaks of the Lattari Mountains, Vico Equense serves as the spectacular gateway to the Sorrento Peninsula. This charming Italian town clings dramatically to tufa cliffs, offering panoramic views of Mount Vesuvius that rival its more famous neighbors, Sorrento and Positano. Unlike those bustling tourist hotspots, Vico Equense maintains an authentic, laid-back Italian atmosphere where the pace of life slows down to match the gentle rhythm of the Mediterranean Sea.

Rich in history and culture, the town's urban landscape is anchored by the striking Church of Santissima Annunziata, a rare Gothic-Baroque masterpiece built directly on a cliff edge overlooking the sea. Wandering through its narrow, cobblestone streets reveals a vibrant community proud of its deep culinary heritage. Vico Equense is famously celebrated as the birthplace of Pizza a Metro (pizza by the meter) and is highly regarded for its artisanal Provolone del Monaco cheese, making it a certified paradise for food lovers looking to experience genuine Campanian flavors.

Beyond its town center, Vico Equense unfolds into a diverse landscape of scenic marine hamlets, secluded beaches like Marina di Vico and Marina di Equa, and fertile hillsides dotted with olive groves. Nature enthusiasts can escape the coastal heat by taking a cable car or winding drive up to Mount Faito, the peninsula's highest peak, which offers shaded beech forests and breathtaking vistas spanning from Capri all the way to Naples. This seamless blend of sun-drenched coastlines and alpine retreats provides a remarkably well-rounded Mediterranean experience.

Traveling to this coastal sanctuary is highly accessible, making it an ideal base for exploring the wider Campania region, including the ruins of Pompeii and Herculaneum. The nearest airport is Naples International Airport (NAP), located approximately 40 kilometers (about 25 miles) to the north. From the airport, visitors can easily reach Vico Equense in just under an hour via a direct shuttle bus service (such as the Curreri Bus), private car transfers, or by taking the scenic Circumvesuviana train line from central Naples.
