ABOUT THE AREA

Ruffec is a charming town located in the Charente department of southwestern France, historically serving as a vital stopover on the route between Paris and Spain. Situated on a limestone plateau at the confluence of the Lien and Péruse rivers, the town offers a tranquil, authentic glimpse into the French 'art de vivre'. With a population of around 3,500 to 4,000 residents, it maintains a human-sized, welcoming atmosphere that balances a quiet rural lifestyle with the amenities of a growing local hub.

The town is steeped in history, featuring narrow, ancient streets, timber-framed houses, and remnants of its medieval past. Notable architectural landmarks include the Saint-André church, which retains a striking Romanesque façade despite later Gothic renovations, and the remains of old mills and wash houses that recall the town's earlier reliance on the river. Visitors often enjoy exploring the historic 'Chaîne' quarter or strolling through the Jardin des Arts, which offers picturesque views of the surrounding countryside.

Life in Ruffec is characterized by its relaxed pace and strong sense of community, bolstered by local markets, shops, and a variety of cultural events, such as the annual International Humour and Dream Festival. Its strategic location makes it an excellent base for exploring the north of the Charente department, with easy access to nearby nature paths for walking and cycling. The town's oceanic climate provides plenty of sunshine, contributing to the pleasant, laid-back quality of life for which the region is known.

For international travelers, the nearest airport is Poitiers-Biard Airport (PIS), located approximately 60 to 65 kilometers to the north. While it is the closest facility, many visitors also utilize Limoges Bellegarde Airport (LIG), which is situated about 80 kilometers to the southeast. Ruffec itself is well-connected by road and rail, including high-speed train links that provide convenient access to major French cities like Paris and neighboring regional centers.
