ABOUT THE AREA

Nestled at the southern foot of the iconic Mount Storžic in the Kamnik-Savinja Alps, Baselj (often spelled Baselj) is a tranquil hillside village in the Upper Carniola (Gorenjska) region of Slovenia. Belonging to the municipality of Preddvor, this picturesque rural settlement sits at an elevation of around 550 meters, surrounded by lush alpine meadows, dense forests, and dramatic mountain peaks. Its pristine setting makes it a quintessential example of traditional Slovenian highland landscape.

The village carries a long history that reaches back to medieval times, with written records attesting to its existence as early as the 12th century. Overlooking the settlement from a prominent hill is the historic Church of Saint Lawrence (Sveti Lovrenc). Renowned for its well-preserved 15th-century Gothic frescoes and Romanesque architectural elements, the church site also holds archaeological significance with remnants of early medieval fortifications and Roman-era artifacts, offering panoramic views across the valley below.

Today, Baselj serves as an ideal retreat for nature lovers, hikers, and travelers seeking authentic village charm. It acts as a popular starting point for alpine ascents up Mount Storžic and neighboring peaks like Kalisce, as well as gentle walking trails through the valley of the Kokra River. Despite its secluded feel, the village retains a warm, close-knit community atmosphere centered around sustainable rural life and traditional Alpine heritage.

Reaching Baselj is remarkably convenient despite its alpine surroundings. The nearest airport is Ljubljana Jože Pucnik Airport (LJU), situated just 10 to 12 kilometers (around 7 miles) to the south. A brief 15-minute drive from the terminal connects international visitors directly to the tranquil foothills of Baselj, making it an effortlessly accessible destination for exploring northern Slovenia.
