Nestled within a traditional medieval bastide town in the Lot-et-Garonne department, bordering the Dordogne region, the property combines historic character, versatile internal proportions, and rare town-center outdoor space.

The interior layout spans multiple levels and offers substantial flexibility for full restoration. Currently configured with 6 bedrooms, 1 family bathroom, 1 separate toilet, and 3 en-suite shower rooms, the generous floor plan provides an ideal foundation for reimagining the space into a boutique bed-and-breakfast, gite accommodations, or a spacious modern residence. Key structural elements and period features offer significant character to build upon, while full modern upgrades throughout will unlock the property's complete market value.

Practical outbuildings and rare exterior features set this town home apart. The ground level includes a private garage providing secure off-street parking, alongside an attached workshop perfect for storage, trade work, or hobby use. To the rear lies a large private garden—a rare asset for a central end-of-terrace town property—complete with an original stone water well. This quiet outdoor sanctuary offers ample room for landscaping, dining terraces, or creating a private garden retreat within steps of village amenities.

ABOUT THE AREA

Castillonnes is a picturesque medieval bastide town situated in the Lot-et-Garonne department of southwestern France, bordering the Dordogne region. Founded in 1259 by Alphonse de Poitiers, brother of King Louis IX, this historic hilltop village is built around a characteristic central square flanked by traditional stone arcades and timber-framed buildings.

The town retains much of its medieval layout, featuring narrow streets, ancient stone gateways, and preserved period architecture. A central hub of local life is the covered market hall, which continues to host bustling weekly markets where residents and visitors gather to buy regional produce, artisanal goods, and local wines.

Situated in the heart of the Dropt Valley countryside, Castillonnes offers a tranquil base for exploring the surrounding agricultural landscape, characterized by sunflower fields, orchards, and rolling vineyards. Visitors can enjoy outdoor activities such as walking, cycling, and exploring nearby medieval chateaux and fellow bastide villages like Monflanquin and Villereal.

The nearest commercial airport to Castillonnes is Bergerac Dordogne Perigord Airport (EGC), located approximately 20 kilometers (about a 20- to 25-minute drive) to the north. For broader international flight schedules and long-haul connections, Bordeaux-Merignac Airport (BOD) and Toulouse-Blagnac Airport (TLS) are both accessible within a 1.5 to 2-hour drive.
