Gradara - Medieval pearl on the Adriatic

Gradara, a charming medieval town in the Marche region, is one of the most beautiful historical towns in Italy. Located in the province of Pesaro-Urbino, just a few kilometers from the Adriatic coast, the village is enthroned on a hill and offers a fascinating interplay of history, culture and scenic beauty.

The town's landmark is the impressive Castello di Gradara, one of the best-preserved fortifications in Italy. The imposing castle with its towers and fortified walls was built in the 12th century and has been the scene of important historical events over the centuries. Gradara became particularly famous for the tragic love story of Paolo and Francesca, which Dante Alighieri immortalized in his "Divine Comedy". Walking through the narrow, cobbled streets, you feel as if you have been transported back in time. Small boutiques, traditional trattorias and cafés invite you to linger and experience the authentic Italian way of life. The fortress walls offer a magnificent panoramic view over the rolling hills of the Marche, the Adriatic coast and, on a clear day, as far as San Marino.

Gradara is not only a place of culture and history, but also a popular destination for connoisseurs and those seeking peace and quiet. The surrounding area is home to picturesque wine villages, first-class restaurants and numerous excursion options - from the beaches of the Adriatic to the historic cities of Urbino, Pesaro and Rimini.

This incomparable location combines the Italian way of life, historical authenticity and scenic beauty - and makes a property in Gradara a unique possession.
