Nestled along the meandering banks of the Dronne River, the town serves as the capital of the Val de Dronne area, often referred to as the gateway to the Perigord Vert. Its location is characterized by rolling hills, lush agricultural land, dense oak forests, and peaceful river valleys that draw visitors seeking an authentic countryside escape.

Historically, Riberac developed as a key market town, a reputation it proudly maintains into the present day. The town's historical center features traditional limestone buildings, narrow streets, and notable architectural heritage, including the 12th-century Church of Notre-Dame, a striking former collegiate church with imposing Romanesque features. Every Friday morning, Riberac hosts one of the largest and most famous open-air markets in the Dordogne, transforming the town square into a bustling hub filled with regional specialties, fresh produce, duck delicacies, local cheeses, and seasonal truffles.

Culturally and lifestyle-wise, Riberac offers a quintessential Southwestern French experience where gastronomy and outdoor recreation take center stage. The surrounding Dronne River provides ample opportunities for canoeing, kayaking, fishing, and riverside walking, while the surrounding countryside is crisscrossed with scenic cycling paths and hiking trails. The town benefits from a vibrant community of local artisans, farmers, and a well-established international expat population, contributing to a welcoming and lively atmosphere throughout the year.

The nearest commercial airport to Riberac is Bergerac Dordogne Perigord Airport (EGC), located approximately 55 kilometers to the south, which typically takes around 50 to 60 minutes to reach by car.
