ABOUT THE AREA

Vale do Paraíso is a civil parish located in the municipality of Azambuja, Portugal. It holds a significant place in Portuguese history as the site where King João II met with Christopher Columbus in 1493, shortly after Columbus's groundbreaking voyage to the Americas.

This historical encounter occurred at 'Casa Colombo,' which today serves as a museum and cultural center dedicated to commemorating this pivotal moment in the Age of Discoveries. The museum showcases exhibits that delve into the Azambuja details of the meeting between the King and the explorer, providing valuable insights into this era of global exploration.

Beyond its historical significance, Vale do Paraíso is renowned for its agricultural productivity, particularly in the cultivation of grapes and olives. The region's Mediterranean climate provides ideal conditions for these crops, resulting in the production of high-quality wines and olive oils. Visitors to the region can partake in tours of local vineyards and olive oil mills, gaining firsthand knowledge of the production processes and enjoying the opportunity to sample the region's renowned products.

Vale do Paraíso is conveniently located within easy reach of Lisbon, the capital of Portugal. The nearest airport to the parish is Lisbon Portela Airport, situated approximately 45 kilometers away. From the airport, visitors can conveniently access the parish by renting a car, taking a taxi, or utilizing public transportation options such as buses.
