Exotic design

The architect says: “As a small Mauritian family business, we have been involved in the design of 'exotic buildings' for 30 years, mainly in Mauritius and the Seychelles. Specializing in hotel and leisure architecture, our design philosophy in tropical environments is to ensure that our buildings blend in with their surroundings. This is often possible by using local primary materials. We firmly believe that our buildings should reflect a strong “sense of belonging” based on respect for the culture and environment of the area.”

How eco energy works

Sensible energy consumption. Optimized spaces and living spaces. Wastewater recovery for watering green spaces, introduction of solar water heaters, optimization of airflow and natural light providing natural ventilation. Waste management By placing waste sorting bins in the villas and on the estate, we aim to treat waste in a way that conserves natural resources and prevents unnecessary waste. To reduce pollution, water pollution (by burying waste) and greenhouse gas emissions. Own vegetable garden There is a vegetable garden to stimulate local agriculture and provide fresh, raw food without genetic modification. The green vegetation spots fit in with their surroundings and offer the residents a tasty and healthy extra. Ethical Concierge Service What is Ethical Conciergerie? For our tourism activities, once all resorts are operational, we will prepare a traveler charter (as in all our other resorts on the island). This includes 13 important ethical obligations that bind us to respect nature and our environment.
