ABOUT THE AREA

Bordighera Alta, or Upper Bordighera, is the historic core of the Ligurian town of Bordighera, Italy. Perched on the Capo Sant'Ampelio promontory overlooking the Mediterranean Sea, this captivating medieval village offers a striking contrast to the newer, lower town. Its architecture is a beautiful labyrinth of narrow, winding cobblestone streets, known as carrugi, opening into small squares, all enclosed by robust late-medieval defensive walls. This layout and elevated position were initially crucial for defense against Saracen pirate incursions in centuries past. The atmosphere within Bordighera Alta is one of timeless tranquility, filled with pastel-colored houses, small artisan shops, and traditional restaurants.

The history of Bordighera Alta is tied to the strategic importance of the area. It was officially established around 1470 by families seeking a protected settlement, eventually growing in prominence and gaining independence from nearby Ventimiglia in the late 17th century. The village's charm has historically drawn renowned visitors and artists. For instance, the famous French Impressionist painter Claude Monet was so enchanted by the local light and landscape during his stay in 1884 that he produced numerous canvases depicting the area. The old town remains an artistic hub, with various ateliers and art exhibits housed in its historic buildings.

Key landmarks within Bordighera Alta include the 17th-century Church of Santa Maria Maddalena, which sits on the main square, Piazza del Popolo, and the Oratory of San Bartolomeo. The entire village offers breathtaking panoramic views of the sea and the surrounding Italian and French coastline. The elevated perspective is a major draw for visitors, particularly at sunset. The area also boasts a rich botanical heritage, with the town often called the 'Queen of the Palms' due to the abundant Phoenix dactylifera date palms, which are historically significant to the region.

The nearest major international airport to Bordighera is the Nice Côte d'Azur Airport (NCE), located in France. It is approximately 39 kilometers (about 24 miles) away, making it easily accessible, with a typical car journey taking around 40 minutes without heavy traffic. While Genoa Airport (GOA) is also an option further afield in Italy, Nice offers the closest and often most convenient air travel link, catering to the significant number of international visitors drawn to the Italian and French Riviera.
