ABOUT THE AREA

Algoz is a traditional Portuguese town located in the central Algarve region, forming part of the municipality of Silves. Unlike the bustling, well-known coastal resorts, Algoz offers a more authentic, tranquil experience of Portuguese life, nestled inland within the fertile agricultural landscape known as the Barrocal. Surrounded by rolling hills and vast orange groves, the town serves as a peaceful residential and commercial centre for the surrounding rural area. Its position provides residents and visitors with a perfect balance: the quiet charm of the countryside is complemented by excellent local amenities, reflecting its history as a place of local trade and community.

Historically, Algoz has an intriguing past, with its name believed to be derived from an Arabic word dating back to the 12th century, a nod to the long Moorish occupation of the Algarve region (al-Gharb). Today, while the town may be smaller than its coastal counterparts, it is known for its strong community life. Visitors can observe traces of its merchant history in the elaborate stone carvings on some older houses and explore its picturesque centre, which features a traditional church with a clock tower. The town is also known for hosting one of the largest monthly markets in the Central Algarve, attracting people from surrounding villages and offering a great selection of local produce, goods, and a taste of local culture.

Despite its tranquil inland setting, Algoz is strategically located to benefit from the best of the Algarve. It lies just north of the A22 motorway, providing superb road links to the entire region. The town is highly convenient for accessing major commercial and leisure attractions; it is situated close to the popular Algarve Shopping centre near Guia and the family-friendly Crazy World Zoo. Furthermore, Algoz is only a short drive from some of the Algarve's most celebrated golden beaches and the renowned coastal towns like Albufeira and Armação de Pêra, ensuring that the iconic cliff walks and Atlantic waters are never far away. The nearby Tunes railway station offers fast train services, connecting the town efficiently to Lisbon and the wider national rail network.

For travellers arriving by air, Algoz is well-served by the region's main international gateway. The nearest airport is Faro Airport (FAO), which is located approximately 34 to 49 kilometres away (depending on the exact location). The drive from the airport typically takes around 35 to 40 minutes via the motorway, making the journey swift and convenient. Faro Airport offers extensive connections to destinations across Europe and beyond, solidifying Algoz's accessibility for international residents and holidaymakers seeking an authentic base in the beautiful Portuguese Algarve.
