The department of the Somme probably conjures up battlefields in your mind but it is an amazing department in a beautiful region.

To the west of the Somme department lies the Picardy Coast, stretching 60 km from the mouth of the Bresle in the south to where the Authie flows into the sea in the north, and set between them, the estuary of the Somme River or Bay of Somme.

It is one of France's major sites for migrating birds. Open water, marshes, dunes and saltwater meadows make up a landscape where water and dry land seem to merge. The Bay of Somme has particularly wide mouth into the English Channel offers exceptional vistas that are constantly changing with the tides and the seasons: monochromes in grey, beige or white, vast skies, light effects reminiscent of opal and mother-of-pearl, and walks that will leave you light-headed from the bracing sea air.

Inland you can discover many fascinating towns and lovely villages and of course the capital city of Amiens with its beautiful gothic cathedral and don't forget to take a walk along the Somme river.
