The Costa Smeralda is one of the most renowned and sought-after coastal regions in the Mediterranean. Located in the north-east of Sardinia, in the historic landscape of Gallura, it combines crystal-clear water, the finest sandy beaches, bizarre granite formations and unmistakable Mediterranean vegetation to create a backdrop of extraordinary beauty. The "Emerald Coast" owes its name to the intense play of colors of the sea, which shimmers between turquoise, azure blue and deep emerald green depending on the light. The Costa Smeralda became internationally famous in the 1960s when Prince Karim Aga Khan IV recognized the potential of this then largely untouched stretch of coastline and, together with other investors, initiated the development of an exclusive vacation destination. Porto Cervo emerged as the elegant center of this new vision: a place that would combine luxury tourism, scenic harmony and architectural restraint. To this day, low buildings, natural stone, light-coloured façades, terracotta roofs and organic lines characterize the appearance of the region.

The Costa Smeralda stands for a lifestyle that combines discretion, exclusivity and natural beauty. World-famous bays such as Cala di Volpe, Romazzino, Capriccioli, Liscia Ruja and Grande Pevero are among the most sought-after seaside resorts in Sardinia. The sea is exceptionally clear, the beaches are surrounded by light-colored sand, pink granite and fragrant macchia. At the same time, the hinterland with its rolling hills, cork oaks, olive trees and traditional villages offers an authentic contrast to the sophisticated coastal world.

Porto Cervo is the social and maritime heart of the Costa Smeralda. The town is known for its elegant marina, international designer boutiques, fine dining, exclusive hotels and a summer social life of international standing. The Marina di Porto Cervo offers around 700 berths and is designed for large yachts and mega yachts, making it one of the most important marinas in the Mediterranean. Despite its worldwide reputation, the Costa Smeralda has retained its special scenic character. In many places, the buildings blend harmoniously into their surroundings, and the architecture is based on Mediterranean forms and local materials. This combination of natural elegance, careful planning and exclusive infrastructure makes the region one of the highest quality real estate locations in Europe. The surrounding area also offers numerous cultural and scenic opportunities. The Pevero Golf Club, the archipelago of La Maddalena, the charming towns of San Pantaleo and Arzachena and archaeological evidence of Nuragic culture are all just a short distance away. The Costa Smeralda thus combines sophisticated living by the sea with nature experiences, sport, gastronomy, culture and international accessibility.
