Description:

- Set in a peaceful residential pocket of Falkensee-Falkenhagen, this attractive detached home offers generous living space across three floors, a practical family layout, and excellent connections into Berlin — all without compromising on greenery, privacy, or everyday convenience.

Built in the early 2000s, the house presents a warm, well-kept exterior with a welcoming front garden and a spacious rear garden ideal for children, entertaining, gardening, or simply relaxing outdoors. A private garage provides secure parking, while the driveway offers additional space for a second car.

The ground floor is designed for modern family living. A spacious kitchen connects naturally with the large open living and dining area, creating a sociable heart of the home with plenty of room for everyday life and entertaining. A guest bathroom adds further convenience on this level.

Upstairs, the property offers three comfortable bedrooms and a large family bathroom, making it ideal for families or anyone needing flexible sleeping and guest accommodation.

The basement significantly expands the usable space of the home. It includes an office or meeting room, a separate private home office, and an additional utility room — perfect for remote working, running a business from home, hobbies, storage, or household organisation.

The property is also equipped with solar panels, adding an energy-conscious feature to this already practical and future-ready home.

Falkensee-Falkenhagen is known for its green surroundings and family-friendly atmosphere. Nearby shopping options include everyday supermarkets, local retailers, cafes, services around Bahnhofstrasse and the Falkenmarkt shopping centre. The area also offers easy access to nature, including Falkenhagener See, Lindenweiher, Bredower Forst and the wider green corridors that help define Falkensee's character. The nearby Spandauer Forst also offers extensive woodland, walking and cycling routes, and protected nature areas.

Transport links are excellent for commuters. From Falkensee station, Berlin Hauptbahnhof can be reached by train in around 24 minutes, with services running approximately every 30 minutes. Berlin Zoologischer Garten is also easily accessible, with journey times typically around 15-27 minutes depending on the connection.

Combining space, comfort, a green setting, home-office flexibility and fast access to central Berlin, this property is an excellent opportunity for families, professionals and anyone seeking suburban living with strong city connections.
