Description:

A diversified portfolio of selected mining projects in Bosnia and Herzegovina is for sale. The assets include significant deposits of strategic raw materials such as silica quartz, gold, zinc, lead, silver, bauxite, manganese, and magnesite.

The projects are located in established mineral-rich regions of the country and feature large-scale exploration areas with attractive prospects for industrial use, mineral extraction, and international export markets.

The portfolio includes, among others:

Donji Vakuf Silica/Quartzite Project
An area of approximately 100 km^2 with high-grade silica deposits and additional gold potential. According to available project documentation, the project demonstrates significant economic potential.

Grmeč Gold, Zinc, Lead, and Silver Project
A large-scale area of approximately 120 km^2 containing several strategic minerals and offering long-term development prospects.
Vareš Gold Project
A mining area of approximately 65 km^2 containing gold, barite, zinc, lead, and silver deposits.
Bosanska Krupa & Oštrelj Bauxite Projects
Two concession areas totaling approximately 150 km^2 with high-quality white and red bauxite deposits.
Bužim Manganese Project
Large exploration area of approximately 110 km^2 with significant manganese resources.
Foča / Zvornik Silica Project
High-purity silicon dioxide (99.99% SiO_2) covering an area of approximately 42 km^2—of interest for industrial applications.
Tuzla Magnesite Project
High-purity magnesite deposits covering approximately 38 km^2 with potential for industrial use.

The summarized project information indicates significant long-term potential for value appreciation. The resource estimates and valuations cited are derived from available project documentation and must be confirmed by independent geological and economic assessments in accordance with international standards (e.g., JORC / NI 43-101) prior to any investment decision.
