ABOUT THE AREA

Tarragona is a province of eastern Spain, in the southern part of the autonomous community of Catalonia. It is bordered by the provinces of Castellon, Teruel, Zaragoza, Lerida and Barcelona and by the Mediterranean Sea. The province's population is 795,902, about one fifth of whom live in the capital, Tarragona.

Located in the east of Spain, in Catalonia. The coast is identified with the Costa Dorada tourism brand. The capital is the city of Tarragona, home to the Roman archaeological complex of Tarraco, declared a UNESCO World Heritage Site.

The Cistercian monastery of Poblet is also a World Heritage Site. You can explore it by doing the Cistercian Route, which takes in the monasteries of Santes Creus and Valbona de les Monges.

The province boasts several natural parks that offer the perfect environment for participating in outdoor sports.

Some of the culinary highlights include the wine-related activities, especially the Penedes Wine and Cava Routes. There are also numerous gastronomic festivals held in the province where you can sample regional recipes such as calcotada and xato.
