About the Area

Apeiranthos is a mountain village nestled on the slopes of Mount Fanari on the island of Naxos, the largest of the Cyclades islands in Greece. Often referred to as the 'Marble Village,' Apeiranthos is famed for its architecture, where paved alleyways, stone archways, and traditional multi-story houses are built almost entirely from local marble. The village preserves a distinct cultural identity, complete with its own unique local dialect, traditional crafts, and vibrant folk music traditions that set it apart from coastal resort towns.

Perched roughly 600 meters above sea level, Apeiranthos offers scenic views over the island's mountainous interior and rolling valleys. Visitors can explore narrow pedestrian streets, relax in shadow-draped plazas (platies) lined with traditional cafes, and visit several specialized cultural stops, including an archaeological museum, a geological museum, a folklore museum, and a museum of natural history.

The village's culinary offerings highlight authentic Naxian gastronomy, centered around locally produced cheeses like Arseniko, cured meats, mountain herbs, and traditional spoon sweets. Beyond its central squares, the surrounding area features scenic hiking trails that connect Apeiranthos to neighboring mountain settlements such as Filoti and Chalki, making it a popular destination for hikers and culture enthusiasts alike.

The nearest airport serving the village is Naxos Island National Airport (JNX), located approximately 26 kilometers (16 miles) to the west near the island's capital, Chora. The scenic drive from the airport up into the mountains to Apeiranthos typically takes around 40 to 45 minutes by car, rental vehicle, or local bus.
