About the Area

Nicosia, the capital of Cyprus, is a fascinating city with a rich history and a unique cultural divide. Located in the center of the island, Nicosia is the only divided capital in Europe, with a Greek-Cypriot southern sector and a Turkish-Cypriot northern sector.

The old city of Nicosia, enclosed by Venetian walls, is a UNESCO World Heritage Site. The narrow streets, historic buildings, and Byzantine churches offer a glimpse into the city's rich past. The Ledra Street checkpoint, which once divided the city, has now been reopened, allowing visitors to explore both sides of Nicosia.

The southern part of Nicosia is a vibrant and cosmopolitan city, with a thriving cultural scene, modern shopping malls, and a wide range of restaurants and cafes. The northern part of the city, known as Lefkoşa, has a distinct Turkish-Cypriot character, with traditional markets, mosques, and a lively atmosphere.

Despite the division, Nicosia has managed to maintain its unique charm and cultural heritage. Visitors can explore both sides of the city, experiencing the different cultures and traditions that have shaped Nicosia's identity.
