ABOUT THE AREA

Valea Crişului (Hungarian: Sepsikőröspatak) is a picturesque commune in Covasna County, Transylvania, situated in the Sfântu Gheorghe Depression. Nestled along the Criş stream at an altitude of approximately 590 meters, the village is steeped in history, with archaeological findings tracing human presence back to the Iron Age and Roman era. Historically part of the Szekely Land, the commune maintains a strong cultural identity, with over 90% of its population being of Hungarian descent.

The commune is renowned for its architectural heritage, most notably the Kálnoky Castle. This Renaissance-style manor, built at the turn of the 17th century, served as the ancestral seat of the Count Kálnoky family and has been beautifully restored over the years. Another significant landmark is the Roman Catholic church, which features 14th-century medieval frescoes and a bell cast in Braşov in 1512, standing as a testament to the region's deep religious and artistic roots.

Beyond its historical sites, Valea Crişului offers unique natural attractions, such as the man-made caves in the rocky slopes of Fenyőş Peak. These caves, including the 14-meter-long Ploti Cave, provide a fascinating exploration point and serve as a winter refuge for local insect species. The surrounding landscape of the Carpathian foothills makes the area a quiet haven for those interested in agrotourism, traditional wood carving, and hiking through the scenic Transylvanian countryside.

For those traveling by air, the nearest airport is Braşov-Ghimbav International Airport (GHV), located approximately 40–45 kilometers away. The drive from the airport to Valea Crişului typically takes about 45 to 50 minutes, passing through the county seat, Sfântu Gheorghe. Other regional options include Bucharest Otopeni (OTP), which is about 150 kilometers away but offers a wider range of international flight connections.
