Informação adicional:

Located on Estrada da Fóia, just a 2-minute drive from the picturesque village of Monchique, this semi-detached granite stone ruin represents an excellent opportunity to develop a rehabilitation project in one of the most sought-after areas of the mountains.

With about 60 m² of construction area on a plot of 210 m², the property benefits from a south orientation, excellent sun exposure and a wide view over the mountains and the sea, characteristics increasingly valued by those looking for quality of life, privacy and contact with nature.

Built in 1951, it preserves the authenticity of traditional stone architecture, constituting an interesting basis for creating a house with its own identity or a small tourist project, subject to its urban viability.

The surroundings are characterized by tranquility and low housing density, without giving up the proximity of all essential services. In a few minutes you will find supermarkets, local shops, pharmacy, schools, cafes and restaurants where you can enjoy the renowned gastronomy of the region.

Due to its privileged location, sun exposure and landscape setting, this property is suitable both for those who want to build a permanent residence or holiday home, as well as for investors looking for a property with potential for appreciation in an area where the supply of properties with these characteristics is increasingly limited.
