ABOUT THE AREA

Gili Gede is a serene, largely undeveloped island located off the southwestern coast of Lombok, Indonesia, in the quiet Sekotong region. As the largest of the cluster known as the 'Secret Gilis,' Gili Gede—meaning 'Big Island' in the local Sasak language—offers a stark, peaceful contrast to the heavily commercialized northern Gili Islands (Trawangan, Meno, and Air). Its coastline is defined by pristine white-sand beaches, calm turquoise bays, and small traditional fishing villages where life moves at an unhurried pace.

The island remains an understated paradise for travelers seeking tranquil natural beauty and authentic cultural interaction. Beyond relaxing along its quiet shores, visitors can spend their days snorkeling vibrant coral reefs, kayaking around the calm peninsula, or hopping to neighboring uninhabited islets like Gili Asahan and Gili Layar. Because motor vehicles are almost non-existent on the island, local transport is limited to walking along dirt pathways, cycling, or taking traditional wooden boat trips along the shore.

Accommodation on Gili Gede ranges from eco-friendly boutique resorts and secluded beachfront bungalows to charming local homestays. The local economy relies heavily on low-impact tourism, small-scale fishing, and pearl farming. This balance allows the island to maintain its untouched tropical atmosphere, making it a favored spot for yachting enthusiasts and eco-conscious travelers looking to disconnect from modern hustle.

The nearest major airport is Lombok International Airport (LOP)—also known as Bandara Internasional Lombok or Zainuddin Abdul Madjid International Airport—located approximately 55 kilometers to the east on mainland Lombok. Reaching Gili Gede from the airport typically involves a 1- to 1.5-hour drive across southwestern Lombok to Tembowong Harbor or Cendrawasih Port in Sekotong, followed by a short 10- to 15-minute boat ride to the island. Direct fast boat services are also available from Bali for those traveling by sea.
