In the heart of the Trentino mountains, in the charming village of Tiarno di Sopra, there was a charming apartment located on the first floor of a small building with only two residential units. It was renovated in 2010, when it was chosen to start a new life.

Looking out the window, you could admire the roofs of the village and the imposing peaks of the mountains. Its location made it the ideal refuge, with shops, schools and services just a few steps away, while the nearby Lake Ledro and the trails of the Adamello Brenta Natural Park encouraged outdoor adventures.

Once you crossed the threshold, a warm glow greeted anyone who entered. The living area, with the open kitchen and the spacious living room, became the beating heart of the house, a place of sharing and relaxation. Natural light filtered generously through the windows, caressing the furnishings with soft shadows. The sleeping area offered rest and tranquility: a large and bright double bedroom and a second room, perfect for guests or as a creative studio. The bathroom, with a window and a deep tub, offered moments of quiet and refreshment.

But the real treasure of this house was on the ground floor: a large cellar, once used to store fine wines and tools for mountain excursions. A precious corner, ready to guard new dreams and new stories. Whoever crossed that threshold immediately felt the warmth of a lived-in and loved home. Perhaps, within those walls, the perfect place to begin a new chapter of life was hidden. Perhaps, that place was waiting for you.
